

body

Turned back time

When Meg Ryan sat down with Oprah on March 1, the surprising thing about her first TV interview in two years was that it didn't seem like she had aged a day during her time out of the spotlight! Despite sporting an obvious trout pout for many years, Meg, 44, has never admitted to having plastic surgery. "People can do whatever they want. Who cares?" she says. But celeb plastic surgeon Dr. Anthony Youn (who has not treated these stars) tells In Touch that he thinks she has a "Botox brow" and says her lips are still overly plumped.

then

MARCH 1993

BOTOX

COLLAGEN

now

MARCH 2006

Have they had work

While most celebs never tell, some of these stars actually admit it!

Smooth as silk

After endless media speculation and repeated claims that she'd "rather just be natural" because the idea of putting stuff in her body was too weird, Teri Hatcher has finally confessed to getting magic shots to keep looking youthful! "In the past, I've had Botox and collagen," the 41-year-old told Glamour, but claims she hasn't had anything done to her face in more than a year. "And I don't plan to. It needs to be OK to have wrinkles," she adds.

then

MAY 2003

BOTOX

COLLAGEN

now

SEPTEMBER
2004

McDreamy's assistant

Patrick Dempsey's boyish good looks helped revive his career, and now he's admitted to getting a helping hand in holding back the years. "Botox has been profoundly important in my life!" reveals the 40-year-old actor. Botox is becoming increasingly popular among men, Dr. Youn says, because they usually don't want people to know they've had anything done and it's "very easy to hide because there's no downtime and no scarring."

then

JULY 2001

BOTOX

now

JANUARY 2006

done?

Impossibly youthful

With her baby-smooth face, it's hard to believe Priscilla Presley is a 60-year-old grandma! Although the actress slams Hollywood's obsession with plastic surgery — "I'm living in a city of Botoxers. This has gone too far," says Priscilla — she shows telltale signs of having gone under the knife. Her wrinkles and crow's-feet seem to be completely smoothed by Botox, says Dr. Youn, and she's probably had lip enhancement as well.

then

APRIL
1994

HER WHOLE FACE HAS CHANGED!

now

MARCH 2006