

Jen's new nose!

► BEFORE
Last March,
"Jennifer's nose looked crooked," says Dr. Youn.
"If you straighten the septum, the crookedness goes away."

Jennifer Aniston shows off a sleeker profile at a film festival in Santa Barbara Jennifer Aniston proudly screened her directorial debut, Room 10, at the Santa Barbara Film Festival on February 4. But the actress also unveiled her new nose!

Jen admitted that she visited a plastic surgeon on January 20 to fix a deviated septum, in which the membrane between the nostrils is crooked. Her rep confirmed that she had the procedure to correct an operation she had more than 12 years ago.

Though Jen, 38, denies getting a nose job, plastic surgeon Dr. Anthony Youn, who hasn't treated Jennifer, tells In Touch, "It's possible she thinned her nose. But she may be telling the truth about not having major nose surgery — she looks great without much swelling."

Another naked scandal for Jen

Jen is only shown naked from behind in The Break-Up.

Jennifer is facing new embarrassment after a topless picture of her, taken while filming The Break-Up, was circulated in Europe. Though a pal insists the photo must be fake, "it certainly looks real," says one person who has seen it. Jen has twice successfully sued to prevent topless shots from being widely published.