She had her brows lifted

Before she left for London, Ashlee had another round of Botox injected into her forehead, an insider says. And Dr. Youn believes that Ashlee may have had an endoscopic brow lift. "It's minimal surgery and leaves the eyebrow with tiny scars," he tells In Touch.

Ashlee Simpson's friends are worried — and they think she's finally gone too far

Ashlee Simpson turned heads with her image- and career-changing nose job in April, but now In Touch can reveal she's had even more work done. "I think she's addicted," says one insider. "She keeps going back for more and more. The nose job was just the beginning." Ashlee had Botox injected on the sides of her eyes, says another insider.

Dr. Boris Zaks, a Beverly Hills dermatologist who does not treat Ashlee, 22, tells In Touch, "It does appear that she's had Botox injections to smooth out her lower forehead wrinkles."

According to Ashlee's friend, she also underwent chin surgery. "The whole idea was to make her jawline softer — she had a more masculine chin before," the pal says.

Michigan-based plastic surgeon Dr. Anthony Youn, who has not treated Ashlee, says it looks like she had her chin done, but Dr. Raj Kanodia — the Beverly Hills plastic surgeon who reportedly performed Ashlee's nose job on April 21 — denies working on her chin.

"When you refine a nose, it can make everything change," he tells In Touch. "With the shaving of her nose, it has made her whole face look different."

Her chin looks so different

An insider says Ashlee's chin surgery was so painful that she had to take the powerful painkiller Vicodin. "She laid low at her house after the procedure," an insider says. "She tried to pull out of a concert in Miami because of the pain, but still had to perform."

She had her teeth done

"The laterals, the teeth next to the front teeth, were rotated outward and now they're straight," says New York dentist Debra Glassman, who has worked with Ashlee's sister, Jessica. "You can achieve this with Invisalign invisible braces."
